Ali -

We wanted to update you on the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia's efforts to address the humanitarian situation in Yemen and achieve a comprehensive political solution to the situation in Yemen.

On April 23, the Coalition to Restore Legitimacy in Yemen, which is led by Saudi Arabia, extended by one month a ceasefire in Yemen in order to help the U.N. advance peace efforts and help Yemen minimize the spread of the Coronavirus. The Coalition's announcement may be viewed here. On April 8, the Coalition first initiated a ceasefire in response to the request of Martin Griffiths, the U.N. Secretary General's Special Envoy for Yemen.

The extension of the ceasefire received praise from the U.S. administration, key international governments, and the U.N. In particular, Secretary of State Mike Pompeo lauded the efforts of Saudi Arabia and the Coalition during a press availability on April 29:

"I commend Saudi Arabia for extending its unilateral ceasefire there now for a month. The Kingdom of Saudi Arabia and the Yemeni Government have answered the special envoy's call to lay down their weapons to stop fighting, focus on defending the pandemic – defeating the pandemic; ask the Iran-backed Houthis to simply do the same. It's what's required. All parties must facilitate humanitarian access, and the Yemeni Government and Yemeni Government institutions, and observe the unity and territorial integrity of Yemen."

In spite of the Coalition's efforts, the Iran-backed Houthis refuse to stop their attacks or join talks, and have instead launched new offensives. Now is the time for Congress to press the Houthis to come to the table and negotiate in good faith for a permanent peace.

Please let us know if you have any questions.

Jon -

We wanted to update you on the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia's efforts to address the humanitarian situation in Yemen and achieve a comprehensive political solution to the situation in Yemen.

On April 23, the Coalition to Restore Legitimacy in Yemen, which is led by Saudi Arabia, extended by one month a ceasefire in Yemen in order to help the U.N. advance peace efforts and help Yemen minimize the spread of the Coronavirus. The Coalition's announcement may be viewed here. On April 8, the Coalition first initiated a ceasefire in response to the request of Martin Griffiths, the U.N. Secretary General's Special Envoy for Yemen.

The extension of the ceasefire received praise from the U.S. administration, key international governments, and the U.N. In particular, Secretary of State Mike Pompeo lauded the efforts of Saudi Arabia and the Coalition during a press availability on April 29:

"I commend Saudi Arabia for extending its unilateral ceasefire there now for a month. The Kingdom of Saudi Arabia and the Yemeni Government have answered the special envoy's call to lay down their weapons to stop fighting, focus on defending the pandemic – defeating the pandemic; ask the Iran-backed Houthis to simply do the same. It's what's required. All parties must facilitate humanitarian access, and the Yemeni Government and Yemeni Government institutions, and observe the unity and territorial integrity of Yemen."

In spite of the Coalition's efforts, the Iran-backed Houthis refuse to stop their attacks or join talks, and have instead launched new offensives. Now is the time for Congress to press the Houthis to come to the table and negotiate in good faith for a permanent peace.

Please let us know if you have any questions.

Norm

Sam -

We wanted to update you on the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia's efforts to address the humanitarian situation in Yemen and achieve a comprehensive political solution to the situation in Yemen.

On April 23, the Coalition to Restore Legitimacy in Yemen, which is led by Saudi Arabia, extended by one month a ceasefire in Yemen in order to help the U.N. advance peace efforts and help Yemen minimize the spread of the Coronavirus. The Coalition's announcement may be viewed here. On April 8, the Coalition first initiated a ceasefire in response to the request of Martin Griffiths, the U.N. Secretary General's Special Envoy for Yemen.

The extension of the ceasefire received praise from the U.S. administration, key international governments, and the U.N. In particular, Secretary of State Mike Pompeo lauded the efforts of Saudi Arabia and the Coalition during a press availability on April 29:

"I commend Saudi Arabia for extending its unilateral ceasefire there now for a month. The Kingdom of Saudi Arabia and the Yemeni Government have answered the special envoy's call to lay down their weapons to stop fighting, focus on defending the pandemic – defeating the pandemic; ask the Iran-backed Houthis to simply do the same. It's what's required. All parties must facilitate humanitarian access, and the Yemeni Government and Yemeni Government institutions, and observe the unity and territorial integrity of Yemen."

In spite of the Coalition's efforts, the Iran-backed Houthis refuse to stop their attacks or join talks, and have instead launched new offensives. Now is the time for Congress to press the Houthis to come to the table and negotiate in good faith for a permanent peace.

Please let us know if you have any questions.

Best,

Norm
